Three large kentias anchoring the bed in this atrium were retained from the previous project. The contractor revamped the look by adding white pebble and red lava rock winding in a natural riverbed flow. The contrast of the rocks livens the space and complements the brick floor.

Two rows of assorted Aglaonemas and bromeliads introduce a vibrant pop of color between the rock beds. Four strategically placed boulders, two at each end, bring a more natural and organic feel to the planter.
